G. MARSTELLER.

For Sale.

THIS subscriber offers for sale a tract of 80 acres of land, on the Colchester road, five miles from Alexandria, adjoining the lands of Haywood Foote and Dennis Johnston. The greater part of this tract is fine meadow land, abundant in water. Also one other tract of 261 acres, on the Ravensworth road, about 6 miles from Alexandria, and one mile from the first mentioned tract, adjoining land of Thos. Janney and Mr. M'Pherson: the greater part of this tract is in wood, the soil good and highly susceptible of improvement from the use of plaster. If these lands are not sold before the first of January next, they will then be for rent.

CHARLES SIMMS.

Gill Nets! Gill Nets!

To the Citizens of Washington, Frederick, and Montgomery counties.

As the General Assembly of Maryland will sit in the course of a few weeks, I take the liberty of calling the attention of the people of the upper counties to the subject of Gill Nets; that all those who may agree with me in opinion, may unite in petitions to the Legislature to pass such laws as may effectually prevent the use of them hereafter in the Potomac. Since the introduction of these Nets into our waters, the people of the upper counties have experienced the most pernicious effects of this practice. It is a fact well known, that many persons at the last season, after leaving their homes, with their teams, at the most busy season of the year, and travelling, perhaps, from 50 to 100 miles to reach the nearest landings, and after being detained there a considerable time, exposed to the inclemencies of the weather, and often without any shelter but what was afforded to them by the coverings of their waggon, while their crops too were suffering greatly at home, were obliged at last to return without any fish. Some procured their Herrings, but not one in ten could get the Shad they wanted for their families. These Gill Nets, it is said, are fished almost exclusively by persons from the Eastward—a covetous people they must be:—they would take the bread from our mouths if they could do it—and they certainly will the fish if left to themselves. It is stated they had 500 vessels engaged in this business during the last season; such a number of Nets will form such an obstruction in the river as to keep back the Shad altogether, and by breaking the schools of Herrings will render even the catching of them uncertain. And what adds to our grievance, the fish that are caught in this manner are not disposed of to our citizens, but are cured on board the vessels that take them, and carried as an article of traffic to some other portions of the Union, or, perhaps, to foreign parts.

The people of the upper counties are peculiarly situated; living remote from any of the Rivers, with which nature has so bountifully watered our state, they have only an opportunity afforded to them once a year of procuring fish of any kind for their families; and it rests with the Legislature to determine whether they shall be deprived of this right, attended as it is too, with great sacrifice, expense and trouble; and it must be known too to the members that may compose that body, that fish, from long use and custom, have become indispensably necessary to our families.

If any doubt should exist as to the facts herein stated, I have only to observe that they will be entirely removed by referring to any one from either of the upper counties, who attended at the landings either of the two last seasons, particularly the last. Having said much more than I intended, I have only to call upon all those who feel an interest in this business, to lose no time in getting signatures to such a petition as I have recommended,—and also to see and converse upon the subject with such persons as they may think proper to send as delegates to the next General Assembly; and I have also to request the favor of the editors of the Fredericktown papers, to give these remarks a place in their respective papers, that the subject may be fully brought before the people of the upper counties.

Exchange & Broker's Office,
Georgetown, District of Columbia.

ROMULUS RIGGS.

AT his office, next door below Crawford's tavern, Bridge-st. Georgetown, will exchange all kinds of Bank Notes on the most reasonable terms.—All persons who may have notes on the banks of North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia, would do well to call on him, as he is largely in the purchase of that kind of money, and will take it on the most reasonable terms.—Persons travelling to the Western Country may at all times get the Bank Notes of the Western Banks at a fair discount, by calling at his Office. For the information of all persons throughout the U. States, R. Riggs makes it known, that all of the Banks of the District of Columbia pay their notes on demand in specie; and it would be much to the advantage of the merchants, and trading to the South and west, to encourage the circulation of the Notes of the Banks of Georgetown, Washington and Alexandria, as it will at all times answer for remittances to the large commercial and Atlantic towns;—all persons emigrating or travelling to the westward should be very particular and take the Notes of the Banks of the District of Columbia as they will find them the most current, there being no counterfeits on the District Banks. The Merchants' Bank of Alexandria has long since failed—all persons should be on their guard, as they will be imposed on.

Ten Dollars Reward.

RAN away from the subscriber about the 4th of August, Negro Woman LOUIZA—she is 25 years old, about 5 feet 5 inches high, and stout; has some of her front teeth out, and is apt to laugh when spoken to; she has a sister Marinda and a mother living in Georgetown, one above Semmes's tavern, and the other on Herring Hill, where she has been harbored for two weeks, and left there to come home; but has not done so. I expect she can be found in Georgetown or Alexandria, where she has many acquaintances. I will give the above reward if brought home, or lodged in jail so that I get her again.

Gone to the Southward or Westward.

A YELLOW WOMAN, called Celia, about 5 feet 2 or 3 inches high—marks like moles on the right side of her face, which, with several letters on her left arm, were made with india ink. She is about four months gone in a state of pregnancy—followed her husband, Jim Clark, a yellow man, who was purchased from this place and taken away in company with a large number of slaves, about two weeks ago, by a man of the name of Bassett. It is supposed they have gone to the westward: Celia was born free and had with her a notarial certificate of her freedom, and description of her person. Her mother, the subscriber, is much afflicted by her manner of going away, and desires that any humane people who may chance to meet with her, will persuade her to return, being apprehensive that when she gets into a strange country, where she will be unknown and out of the reach of her friends and those who would be likely to protect her, attempts may be made by some avaricious and unprincipled persons, to deprive her of her liberty, and sell her for a slave. Should any such attempt be made, fifty dollars reward will be paid to any person who will communicate such information as shall lead to the conviction of the offenders, and the recovery of the woman.

From the New-England Galaxy.

POCAHONTAS.

Captain John Smith, the hero of the following poem, and the father of the colony of Virginia, was a man of romantic genius, and delighted in daring exploits. In his youth he studied military history and tactics. He embarked for Italy with some pilgrims; a tempest obliged them to anchor, and attributing their unfavorable voyage to the presence of Smith, whom they deemed a heretic, they threw him into the sea—but by swimming, he reached the shore. He afterwards entered the service of the emperor of Austria against the Turks, and by his exploits soon obtained the command of two hundred and fifty horsemen. At the siege of Regal, the Ottomans sent a challenge, purporting that one of their lords, to divert the ladies, would fight any of the Christian troops. Smith accepted it, and meeting his antagonist on horseback, in view of the ladies on the battlements, killed him, and bore away his head. A second and a third met the same fate. He was afterwards taken prisoner, but killed his tyrannical master, and escaped to Russia. When he returned to England, he resolved to seek adventures in North America, and arrived with the first emigrants who made a permanent settlement in Virginia. While exploring Chickahominy river, he was taken prisoner, after having killed, with his own hand, three of the Indians. He was carried to Powhatan, an Indian king, by whom he was about to be beheaded, when he was saved by the chief's favorite daughter, Pocahontas. Vide Belknap's Am. Biog.

The chieftain is bound in the hut of his foe,
And far are the friends who should rescue him now;
The stone for his head is just placed on the floor,
To pillow the sleep that shall wakeen no more.

What profits him now the renown of the fight,
When the crest of the infidel bow'd to his might...
While the crescent shone dim from afar o'er the plain
[plain] [plain]
Where her champions by Smith in the combat were

What avails now the arm that in combat ne'er fail'd,
And the courage of soul that in danger ne'er quail'd,
When the strife rag'd around him, and none could withstand

The dint of his falchion, the skill of his hand?

That arm is now weaponless, poison'd with cords,
And the last sad assistance his courage forlorn;
To bow to his fate without heaving a sigh,
And descend to the grave as a soldier should die.

Already his head on the stone is repos'd,
For the sleep of the grave now his eyelids are clos'd...
[close] [close]
And the weapon is rais'd, with whose falling shall
The carer of his life, and his mind be at peace.

But ne'er shall it fall—for one bosom is nigh
That grieves for his fate, and laments he should die.
On accident thy name from our minds should efface
The crimes of thy sire and the guilt of thy race.

Her form o'er the chieftain despairing she throws,
While wildly her soft arms his body enclose, [blow]
Shields his head with her own from the fast falling blow,
And demands of her father the life of his foe.

"My father! thy bosom let pity once move,
And thine enemy spare for the child of thy love;
For my life thou shalt take ere his death thou canst give."

Oh my father, consent that thy daughter may live."

Aghast stands the savage with weapon rais'd high,
While terror and anger flash fierce from his eye;
While affection and hatred his heart fiercely rave,
And long in his bosom for mastery strive.

But affection prevails, and his anger disarms—
His daughter he raises and clasps in his arms—
Bids her tremble no more, for the chief shall return
To the friends who in anguish his destiny mourn.

A CONVENIENT HABIT.

Judge Rook, in going the western circuit, had a great stone thrown at his head, but from the circumstance of his stooping very much, it passed over him. "You see," said he to his friend, "that had I been an upright judge, I might have been killed."

An eminent quaker visited a lady of rank whom he found six months after the death of her husband, sitting on her sofa covered in black cloth, in all the dignity of woe. Gently taking her by the hand, he thus accosted her—"So friend, I see that thou hast not yet forgiven the Almighty." This reproach had such an effect upon the person to whom it was addressed, that she immediately had all her trappings of grief destroyed, went about her necessary avocations—and soon after to another husband.

A CONTRAST.

The fears of the undisciplined and the cultivated seem to be of a distinct class as their stations and habits: what almost annihilates the former with horror, scarcely produces in their superiors any inclination but to smile; and what excites our utmost consternation, or, at least, anticipated dread, is thought of by them with complete indifference, as yet often, wholly disregarded.

Extract of a letter from a commercial house in Liverpool, of 10th Sept. received per Georgia, at Savannah.

"It takes very fine cotton indeed to fetch 21d, the principal sales are at 19s 1/2 and 20s—the stock is getting particularly heavy of inferior kinds, which must press heavy on the market—the Sea Island speculation will not be so productive to the adventurers as was anticipated, for although you see quotations of 4s to 4s 1/2, there is scarcely a bag that brings that price, the sales being generally 3s 3/4 to 3s 5/4, and do not average above 60 or 70 bags a week, so that it is next to impossible to force off the stock, before the new crop arrives." [Charleston Courier.]

At the late meeting of the Roanoke Navigation Company, John Randolph, Esq. attended, and entered with the greatest spirit into the important design in hand. He addressed the meeting several times with his usual elegance and force; and made, on the part of some gentlemen deeply interested in the opening of the river, several important propositions.

[Raleigh Minerwa.]

From the New-York Evening Post.

The President of the United States has appointed the Hon. Smith Thompson, chief justice of this state, Secretary of the Navy, in the place of Benjamin W. Crowninshield, of Massachusetts, resigned.

With so common sincerity, we congratulate the public on this event. We shall not be suspected of a design to flatter, if we say unhesitatingly that in making this selection the President will have given the greatest satisfaction to the citizens of the state of N. York. Whatever may have happened during the irritations of party feeling, no man alive ever denied to the gentleman now appointed, the character of a clear and unblemished integrity. When Pope wrote, "an honest man's the noblest work of God," it was but a poor compliment paid to a negative quality; but now-a-days, as times go, its rarity raises it to the rank of a cardinal virtue.

One serious regret only mingles with the pleasure we should otherwise experience on this occasion; and that is caused by the loss of such a man upon the bench of our supreme court, which, we much fear, such is the state of things, will not be supplied by any one who has nothing else to recommend him than the qualities of competence, probity, and attachment to the constitution of our country. Whether this appointment is, in a presidential view, worth the acceptance of Judge Thompson, we do not know, nor whether he will resign for it his office of chief justice.

Extract of a letter from a young lady in Amherst, (N. H.) to her brother in Paterson, (N. J.) dated October 31.

"A mineral spring has lately been discovered in Milford, in a very singular manner. A young man, son of Mr. Sergeant, had been very sick for some time; a short time before his death he dreamed that a man came to him, and stood on a rock in a field not far from his father's house, and told him, that near that place was a spring, the water of which would cure a consumption. He dreamed it a second and a third time within a week. He was very anxious indeed to have them dig and find it, and wished to go and show them where it was; they carried him on a bier into the field, and he informed them where the man stood in his dream. They dug and found a spring of very singular looking water; (I have seen some of it,)—it resembles clay-pit water, but will never settle nor strain clear. This the young man thought was not the right spring and wished them to dig further; he said the man told him a flat stone would lie over the spring. The young man died, and the last word he said was dig! Since his death, a man has been there from Massachusetts, who could use the mineral rod; they dug twelve feet into the earth and came to the flat stone; they drew it off with oxen, and under it was the spring: the water is clear, and people can drink a much greater quantity of it than of other water: on some it operates as an emetic, on others differently. We do not know yet what the effect will be on invalids. It has excited great curiosity here, and people are coming from all quarters to drink the water and carry it away with them. They have come forty or fifty miles already. You may depend that this is all true."

Reported for the Franklin Gazette.

United States Circuit Court U. States vs. Wm. Wood.

The prisoner was tried and convicted at the last session of the Court. The judgment was then arrested on account of informality in the indictment. A new indictment was preferred at the present session of the Court, which was returned by the grand jury a "true bill." On Tuesday the 10th inst. the trial came on. The same witnesses were examined as on the former trial, with the exception of Thomas Hare, a material witness, who lately died in Prison.

Mr. Ingersoll, the District Attorney, offered himself as a witness to prove what had been given in evidence by Thomas Hare, (now deceased) at the last trial.

Mr. Phillips, for the prisoner, opposed it as a novel attempt. That this was not the same case; although it is a case between the U. States and William Wood, yet the indictments vary. He also objected, as it would be a most dangerous precedent, to admit the evidence of an Attorney of one of the parties.

The Court said, there was no doubt that this was a case between the same parties, and that Wood had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness, which makes the rule good. That if the case was reversed, and Thomas Hare had been Wood's witness, on whom he had relied to exculpate him, would it not be monstrous to say, that the act of God was to deprive Wood of the benefit of such testimony? The rule applies to criminal as well as civil cases, but the words must be such as the witness recollects them given by the deceased witness, and he must not swear to them because they are on his notes.

Mr. Ingersoll then stated that he had no recollection of them, but that which his notes furnished him, and not coming within the rule laid down by the Court, he was not sworn.

R. Bachs was then offered to give testimony on the same subject. He stated that he had taken notes of the evidence of Thomas Hare, on the former trial, and in reporting that trial in the Franklin Gazette, he had sent those notes, without alteration, into his printing office; from which the testimony of Thomas Hare was printed.

The Court at first refused to hear Mr. Bachs's testimony; but at the meeting of the Court in the afternoon, they reconsidered their decision, and allowed the witness to refer to his paper under the same rule they had previously laid down.

R. Bachs then stated, that he had taken the testimony of T. Hare as he gave it on the former trial, and had sent his notes into his office, without alteration, from which the report of the case was printed; that although he had every reason to believe the copy was correct in substance, yet he would not swear to its containing the precise words that fell from the witness, as he did not compare the proof with the copy, but merely corrected the typographical errors; and that he had not such a recollection of T. Hare's testimony, as to enable himself to give evidence of it, according to the decision of the Court. He was therefore not examined as to that point.

Independent of T. Hare's testimony, the evidence was similar to that given on the former trial.

The District Attorney took the same ground as before, as to the meaning of those words in the act of Congress, which formed part of the charges in the indictment against the prisoner, viz: "Putting the life of the mail carrier in jeopardy by the use of dangerous weapons."

Mr. Phillips made a very ingenious defence for the prisoner.

The Court delivered a similar charge as to the law, to that which they gave at the former trial, and entered fully into an explanation of the word "jeopardy," which they said meant the same as "danger," they said it became their duty so to do, in order that persons, who in future might conceive the idea of robbing the mail, might not be misled as to the punishment. That if a sword was used, although not drawn, if a pistol was used, although not fired, the life, under the terms of the law, must be considered as in jeopardy; and that it was not incumbent on the U. States to prove that the pistol, if used, were loaded, but that it was incumbent on the prisoner to prove, that if used, they were not loaded.

The Jury then retired for an hour, and returned with their verdict Not Guilty on the first and second counts of the indictment—Guilty on the third count.

The punishment would have been death if the prisoner had been convicted on the first or second count—The conviction on the third count subjects him to imprisonment not exceeding ten years.

The conviction of Wood is the termination of the fate of those persons who engaged in the daring project of robbing the mail. Of the five persons concerned, two have been executed, one died in prison, and two are condemned to atone for their crime by a long servitude at hard labor. An awful example to those who hope to snatch by desperate enterprises the means of indulging in prodigality and crime, instead of gaining by honest means the rewards of virtue and industry.

GENERAL KLEBER.

Translated for the New-York Columbian from French papers.

Marseilles, Aug. 19.

Our city has just witnessed a ceremony, as imposing on account of its object as interesting from the recollection it excited.

Conformably to the orders which had been transmitted by his excellency the minister of the war department to lieut. general the baron de Damas, commandant of the 8th Military Division, the body of Gen. Kleber, which had remained deposited at Chateau d'Iff upwards of 17 years, was yesterday disinterred in order to be conveyed to Strasburg, the birth-place of this celebrated general.

At 9 in the morning, the whole of the civil and military functionaries met at the house of baron de Damas, whence they repaired with this general officer to the Quay de la Canebiere, where the body was to be disembarked. The members of the Protestant Consistory marched at the head of the procession in their ecclesiastical costume, the religion being that which the general professed. The troops of the garrison and the National Guards were ranged on each side of the Quay.

Soon after the boats of the marine administration appeared rowing towards the shore—in the first of which was M. de Sellans, sub-military intendant; M. de Mas, of the superior staff, and the officers of the Engineers charged with the restoration of the body—in the second was a detachment of troops bearing the mortal remains of the hero, to whose memory all were prepared to render that homage which he had so well merited. The coffin being landed and deposited on the quay, M. Marion, pastor of the reformed church, pronounced a discourse eminently remarkable for elevation of thought and nobleness of style, and especially for the religious sentiments which inspired the orator. The discourse having been ended, was followed by a double salvo of musketry, after which the procession was put in motion. The gendarmes and musicians of the National Guards opened the march. Next came as commandant of the troops, the baron de Damas, with his staff.

The funeral car advanced immediately after the coffin covered with a pall the corners of which were borne by Mr. Picard, colonel of the gendarmes; M. Serran, col. of the superior staff of the division; the count de Ponteves, col. and chief of the staff of the National Guard, and Mr. Straforello, superior officer of the National Guard of Marseilles. Immediately after the car, followed the members of the consistory, and after them the public functionaries, and a considerable number of old military men, companions in arms of the deceased general.

The troops of the line and National Guards formed a double line on each side. In this order, and to the sound of music, analogous to the mournful circumstance, the procession slowly and majestically traversed the Canebiere and the environs of the city in the midst of an immense multitude, whose serious appearance and demeanour so well bespoke their feelings on witnessing this ceremony. Arrived outside the gate of Aix, the troops formed in order of battle, and fired the last round of musketry, when the funeral car proceeded onwards under the escort of the gendarmes.

This is the manner in which, under the reign of a Bourbon, men are honored, (even after death) who have served their country well—and Marseilles, in this circumstance has proved by her homage to the memory of a great man, how well she has identified herself with the noble intentions of the sovereign.

On the 7th Sept. the remains of general Kleber were deposited in the cemetery of the cathedral at Strasburg, near those of the celebrated marshal Sax, on which occasion the mayor addressed a special invitation to the retired officers, as well as those not in service, to assemble and pay their last respects to one of their chiefs who had contributed so much to the glory of the French army. From the notice which follows, as well as from the religious ceremonies which took place at the interment, it appears that the people in Marseilles had been mistaken as to the general's religious belief. The mayor of Strasburg caused the following notice to be inserted in the gazette of that city.

"It has been remarked with astonishment in the account given of the ceremonies that took place at Marseilles on the removal of the mortal remains of gen. Kleber, that the general professed the protestant religion, and that on this supposition M. Marion, a minister of that church, delivered a religious discourse on the occasion. It has been ascertained and verified here, that general Baptist Kleber was born at Strasburg the 9th of march, 1743—that he had been baptised in the Catholic parish church of St. Peter—and that such of his kindred as live yet in this city are all of the Catholic religion. (Signed)

DE KENTZINGER, Mayor.

*Gen'l Kleber was assassinated in Egypt by fanatic Arabs; his body was conveyed to France after the convention between Menou and lord Hutchinson, by which it was agreed that the French army should evacuate Egypt.

From a late London Paper.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

An inquisition was taken yesterday afternoon before Thomas Stirling, esq. coroner, at Sugar Loaf, King-street, Drury-lane, on the body of Michael Dillon.

Mr. Fred. Accum, No. 11, Old Compton-street, Soho, surgeon, stated, that on Monday morning he was called upon by the father of the deceased, to examine an article which he produced in a paper, part of which he said had produced the death of his son. He found the contents to be Epsom Salts, and said to him that that had not produced the death of his son. He viewed the body, and offered to open it for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of the death; the friends of the deceased declined having the body opened, and he applied to Mr. Le Brun, surgeon, King-street, Covent-garden, (of whom he was informed the Epsom Salts was bought) to know what he had sold the deceased. He there learned that a young man had purchased, on the preceding night, one ounce of Epsom Salts and one ounce of Acid of Sugar, (a deadly poison) in paper. The article resembled each other. Wilson was of opinion that it was extremely improper to sell articles resembling each other, one being a poison, without its being written upon in large letters, "poison." Mr. Le Brun informed him, that he did offer to write "poison" upon the Sugar of Lead, but the young man declined it.

Dillon deposed, that the deceased was her brother; he was well in health on Saturday night, except a breaking out upon his hand, and a doctor advised him to take some salts. The deceased purchased some salts at Mr. Le Brun's shop, and told her on Saturday night to mix the powder the next morning in some water for him to take. About 6 o'clock on Sunday morning she went to a cupboard in the deceased's bedroom, and saw two papers of an equal size, and both of the same colour. She supposed that they both contained salts. She called the deceased to breakfast, and when she had desolved the contents of one paper in warm water, and gave it to the deceased, he drank about half of it, and became very sick, and soon after stamped on the floor and said—"My inside is burning—oh! the boot stop!" She went to Mr. Le Brun's, and he sent an emetic. After she returned home her father came in; he was distracted. She held the remains of the poison in her hand: her father endeavored to seize it, and declared that he would go with him, and take the remainder of the poison: she threw it out of the window to prevent him. The deceased lived about half an hour after he took the powder. Neither of the papers were written upon. The deceased spoke on Saturday about cleaning his boots.

Mr. Accum, being re-examined, stated, that he had, at the request of the Jury, opened the body, and from the appearances after dissection, he was of opinion the death of the deceased was caused by his taking some corrosive substance; Acid of Sugar would produce the effect.

Mr. John Cooper, assistant to Mr. Le Brun, chemist, King-street, Covent-garden, stated, that on Saturday night last the deceased came to Mr. Le Brun's shop, and purchased an ounce of Acid of Sugar, for which he paid one shilling. He was going to write the name of it on, when the deceased said, "never mind," and seemed in a hurry. He was about to leave, when he asked for an ounce of Epsom Salts, and left the shop immediately.

Coroner—A superficial observer might mistake acid of sugar for salts?

Mr. Cooper—There is a difference in appearance and in taste.

Coroner—Yes, one is very sour, and the other extremely nauseous.

Mr. Cooper—One is larger in the crystals than the other.

Juryman—I am of opinion Mr. Cooper's conduct was extremely culpable. Pray, Mr. Cooper, if you had seen the two papers in a few hours afterwards, could you by a superficial view, have told which contained the salts and which the acid of sugar?

Mr. Cooper—No, I should not.

Juryman—Then I hope this will prove a caution, not only to you, but every other medical man.

Mr. Stirling, in summing up the evidence, marked the impropriety of Mr. Cooper's conduct; he said that he had acted with great incaution, but not with any criminality.

Juryman—Every medical man ought to have the word "poison" written on deleterious drugs.

Coroner—Your verdict will then be 'the deceased died from taking acid of sugar in mistake of salts; if any gentleman is of a contrary opinion he will say so.

Juryman—I differ. I think the deceased's death was caused by the culpable neglect of Mr. Cooper, and I wish that to be mentioned in the verdict as a caution to all medical men, and which may be the means of preventing a recurrence of such a lamentable case.

One of the jury thought such a verdict would prove injurious to Mr. Cooper's reputation.

The coroner said that it was truly an unfortunate accident; there was some negligence on the part of Mr. Cooper, but that he had acted wilfully was totally out of the question.

After a long conversation and warm discussion, the following verdict was recorded:—"died in consequence of having taken a large quantity of acid of sugar in mistake of a dose of salts, which it strongly resembles."

An amendment afterwards was agreed to, that the words "a large quantity" should be omitted, and the words "half an ounce" should be inserted. It took place at the instance of the surgeon, that the medical world might be acquainted with the effects of half an ounce of acid of sugar, which dispatched the deceased in sixteen minutes.

The deceased was 27 years of age, and was to have been married in a few days to a young lady, who has been ever since in a state of distraction.

Died.

At Philadelphia, on Thursday last, Dr. Joun Syms Doussay, Professor of Anatomy in the University of Pennsylvania. In this melancholy event, Society has to regret one of its most distinguished ornaments, and the Medical College of our city has been short of one of its brightest beams.

Ardent in the pursuit of science, yet ever gay and affable in social intercourse, no one admitted as a philosopher, more profound respect, or as a companion, more sincere attachment. He had just appeared with universal applause, as the successor of our lamented Wistar, and gave to those who witnessed his first effort in the station, unequivocal evidence of genius and erudition, more than adequate to the task he had undertaken. Young, laborious, and brilliant, the prospect of future usefulness to his species, of honor to his friends, and of reputation to himself, was almost boundless. It has been suddenly and irreparably blasted. He has left a widow and three children, who, amid the general gloom, can only be considered as the chief mourners for his loss. [Franklin Gazette.]

Gunston for Sale.

THIS elegant estate is situated on the Potomac, 16 miles below Alexandria—it is bounded on three sides by the Potomac and Pohick creek, and contains nearly 3,000 acres of land, level and fertile, to which are attached six shade and bearing fisheries, two of which command the river channel. This land will be laid off in four tracts, so as to have one or more fisheries to each; these tracts will be again divided if requisite. This estate is level and beautifully situated, very fertile, and remarkably healthy. Plaster acts with an effect equal to that of any part of Virginia or Pennsylvania.—I have used 500 bushels in twelve months, and such is its beneficial operation, that were I to keep this land I should considerably increase the quantity. A manufacturing mill is distant about two miles on a stream navigable for vessels carrying 1200 bushels of wheat, where the Baltimore and Disk of Columbia prices are given for grain; being bounded on 3 sides by water, a small extent only of fence is necessary to inclose the whole: it would be admirably adapted to grazing. The improvements are a large and very substantial brick mansion; 40 by 70 feet, with every necessary out-house, three commodious barns, houses for Negroes, and fish houses at each of the fisheries. 120,000 bricks and 1000 bushels of lime are just burnt on the premises. There is a considerable extent of live fence, both useful and ornamental, two orchards of well selected apples and peach, besides an abundance of other choice fruit. More than 150 acres are in clover, 200 in corn, and land is in preparation for sowing 250 bushels of small grain. Any quantity of hay can be cut from the low grounds, some of which (and all might) have been reclaimed at a trifling expense. The river and creeks, abound with wild fowl, particularly canvas backs, the woods with deer and a variety of other game. Mules, cattle, highly improved sheep, farming utensils and household furniture can be had. The terms of sale will be accommodating. Property in any of the cities, negroes, bank stock, western lands, or lands near the Ridge, will be taken in payment.—Letters must be addressed to me at Pohick Church, Fairfax county, Virginia.

Valuable Property for Sale.

I WILL sell my property on King, West and Cameron streets, being one acre, or half a square, in fee simple, fronting one hundred and twenty three feet five inches on King street, the same on Cameron street, and three hundred and fifty three feet and two inches on West street. There are erected on said premises, an excellent two story brick dwelling house on West street, with smoke house, stable, carriage house, and every convenience suitable for the accommodation of a respectable family. A large two story brick warehouse, corner of King and West streets, now in the occupation of Thomas Sivan, Jr., and another brick warehouse, with dwelling attached, fronting on King street, occupied by George Kincaid. These warehouses are built of the best materials, not surpassed by any in town.—Two brick dwelling houses, fronting on King street, with sufficient room for the erection of other buildings, having every accommodation for families—and a large lot on West and Cameron streets, sufficiently large for the erection of fifteen respectable tenements.

This is a most desirable property for any man of fortune who wishes to improve it, or receive a good interest for his money, and offers advantages equal if not superior to any situation in the town of Alexandria.

Likewise, two frame dwelling houses, fronting on King street, adjoining the warehouse occupied by George Kincaid. This property is subject to a small ground rent of thirty dollars and forty one cents per annum.

Also, a lot of ground, in fee simple, containing ten and three quarter acres, two miles from town, on the old Leesburg road, near the property of Wm. Robinson, Esq.

This lot is beautifully situated, having a fine view of Alexandria and of the Potomac—is well taken with clover, and is capable of the highest improvement.

The above property will be sold together, or in part, and a liberal credit given to suit purchasers.

Valuable Property for Sale.

THE subscriber is desirous of selling a handsomely situated farm, on Hunting creek, in Fairfax county Virginia, adjoining the Mount Vernon estate and the lands of general Thomson Mason, four miles from Alexandria, containing about 240 acres, 30 of which are in wood—40 to 50 in thriving meadow of clover and timothy—a part of the residue recently seeded with wheat and rye, and clover, last spring—the whole enclosed with a new post and rail fence.—The improvements are, a comfortable and convenient frame dwelling house and kitchen, smoke house, poultry house, granary and stables.—There is on this place a rich and productive garden, and a large body of marsh meadow, from which may be saved annually 100 tons of hay, nearly as nutritious as the best timothy or clover.—With the farm would be sold a number of very valuable horses, cows and sheep; wagon, carts, and a variety of farming utensils and household and kitchen furniture; corn, oats and rye, and 40 tons hay. Also, adjoining the one above described, a farm containing 160 acres, recently enclosed, on which is a brick house, which a trifling expense would render comfortable. The soil is excellent, and a considerable part might be easily converted into meadow—it would be sold with the other or separately. Also, a number of valuable servants, male and female.—To prevent unnecessary application, he would observe, that they will only be sold to persons residing in the District or its vicinity, and not to be carried from it. The subscriber will also sell the greater part of his household furniture, which is new and handsome. For terms of all or any part of the above property, apply to NOBLET HERBERT, Esq., or

Gill Nets! Gill Nets!

To the Citizens of Washington, Frederick, and Montgomery counties.

As the General Assembly of Maryland will sit in the course of a few weeks, I take the liberty of calling the attention of the people of the upper counties to the subject of Gill Nets; that all those who may agree with me in opinion, may unite in petitions to the Legislature to pass such laws as may effectually prevent the use of them hereafter in the Potomac. Since the introduction of these Nets into our waters, the people of the upper counties have experienced the most pernicious effects of this practice. It is a fact well known, that many persons at the last season, after leaving their homes, with their teams, at the most busy season of the year, and travelling, perhaps, from 50 to 100 miles to reach the nearest landings, and after being detained there a considerable time, exposed to the inclemencies of the weather, and often without any shelter but what was afforded to them by the coverings of their waggon, while their crops were suffering greatly at home, were obliged at last to return without any fish. Some procured their Herrings, but not one in ten could get the Shad they wanted for their families. These Gill Nets, it is said, are fished almost exclusively by persons from the Eastward—a covetous people they must be:—they would take the bread from our mouths if they could do it—and they certainly will the fish if left to themselves. It is stated they had 500 vessels engaged in this business during the last season; such a number of Nets will form such an obstruction in the river as to keep back the Shad altogether, and by breaking the schools of Herrings will render even the catching of them uncertain. And what adds to our grievance, the fish that are caught in this manner are not disposed of to our citizens, but are cured on board the vessels that take them, and carried as an article of traffic to some other portions of the Union, or, perhaps, to foreign parts.

The people of the upper counties are peculiarly situated; living remote from any of the Rivers, with which nature has so bountifully watered our state, they have only an opportunity afforded to them once a year of procuring fish of any kind for their families; and it rests with the Legislature to determine whether they shall be deprived of this right, attended as it is too, with great sacrifice, expense and trouble; and it must be known too to the members that may compose that body, that fish, from long use and custom, have become indispensably necessary to our families.

If any doubt should exist as to the facts herein stated, I have only to observe that they will be entirely removed by referring to any one from either of the upper counties, who attended at the landings either of the two last seasons, particularly the last.

Having said much more than I intended, I have only to call upon all those who feel an interest in this business, to lose no time in getting signatures to such a petition as I have recommended,—and also to see and converse upon the subject with such persons as they may think proper to send as delegates to the next General Assembly; and I have also to request the favor of the editors of the Fredericktown papers, to give these remarks a place in their respective papers, that the subject may be fully brought before the people of the upper counties.
